

Dear debate organization,

We are excited you're interested in joining the IDEA network and expanding access to debate education worldwide!

What does IDEA stand for?

IDEA - the International Debate Education Association - is an international network of debate organizations supporting civic dialogue and open discussion. Our mission is focused on five key areas:

1. Promoting debate-based learning as a tool for empowering young people to think critically, live and work more successfully, highlighting the importance of democratic educational process and participative learning;
2. Enhancing critical thinking and developing transferable skills to prepare young people for the challenges of the modern world;
3. Promoting freedom of speech as a fundamental right, empowering young people to express their views and opinions without fear of censorship or retaliation
4. Supporting youth participation and fostering democratic practices through empowering young people for civic engagement and advancing the dialogue between decision-makers and citizens;
5. Strengthening Global citizen identities through supporting young people in shaping their future and becoming informed and active global citizens;
6. Promoting human rights through inclusion and anti-discrimination programs, giving voice to youth with fewer opportunities;
7. Advocating for and improving citizenship education with a particular focus on tackling threats to democratic governance through direct citizenship education programs supported by IDEA and carried out by our members.

We are working on growing IDEA into:

- A debate training center providing training opportunities and resources for coaches and debaters to expand their skills;
- A fundraising platform and capacity builder, supporting our member organizations in securing the funds they need to run and develop their programs through approaching private and institutional donors;
- An international debate think tank and advocacy hub engaged in organizing conferences for debate educators and academics and facilitating debate-focused publishing.

The Structure of IDEA

Voting members are debate organizations or national debate programs which meet certain criteria, as detailed in the IDEA Statutes and later in this document. Together, they form the General Assembly (GA) of IDEA, its principal governing body. The GA is tasked with voting on the organization's strategic plans, mission, and goals, electing members of our Board of Directors, and more. IDEA members are also invited and subsidized to participate in international events. Please visit our website for more information on IDEA's current voting members.

Non-voting members of IDEA are debate organizations or similar entities that are actively involved in the field of debate methodology but do not have voting rights within IDEA. These organizations are recognized and affiliated with IDEA, contributing to the promotion and advancement of debate education and practice. While non-voting members do not participate in the decision-making processes of IDEA's General Assembly, they still benefit from the network and resources provided by the organization. They can engage with other like-minded organizations and individuals, collaborate on projects, and exchange best practices in the field of debate methodology. Non-voting members may also receive invitations and subsidies to participate in international events organized or supported by IDEA.

The Board of Directors of IDEA is a governing body elected by the General Assembly (GA). Composed of individuals with diverse backgrounds and expertise, the Board plays a vital role in supporting the growth and development of the organization. The primary responsibility of the Board is to provide strategic guidance and oversight to IDEA. The Board works closely with the executive office and other stakeholders to establish and implement the organization's strategic plans, mission, and goals. The Board ensures that IDEA remains aligned with its core values and objectives while adapting to the evolving needs of the debate community.

The executive office is a vital component of IDEA, responsible for managing the day-to-day operations and supporting the overall functioning of the organization. Comprising a dedicated team of professionals, the executive office serves as the administrative body that facilitates IDEA's activities and initiatives.

Beyond these formal categories, IDEA is a network, broader than just our membership. IDEA offers the opportunity to partner with other like-minded organizations and individuals, to collaborate on projects supporting the development of new applications for debate methodology. We also work as a network to secure resources our members need to create change using debate methodology, whether working with general society or with elementary, secondary, and higher education students. Please read more about our goals in IDEA's program documents on our website.

Which types of organizations can become IDEA members?

IDEA's membership currently includes different types of organizations, ranging from debate organizations or other entities who do not necessarily work with large numbers of debate clubs but are working on implementing debate methodology and whose work aligns with IDEA's values to large network debate organizations and national debate program coordinators which, as umbrella organisations, work with many debate clubs/schools in their countries/regions.

IDEA has a two-tiered membership system and recognizes voting and non-voting members. All organizations accepted into IDEA membership are at first assigned non-voting status for two years, no matter their size.

As per the IDEA Statutes, voting membership is open to organisations:

1. Which are public benefit organizations or other non-governmental, not-for-profit organizations established under the Act of the country concerned, anywhere in the world; and
2. Who have a stable debate programme within their organization with at least two hundred (200) stable beneficiaries (members of debate clubs or similar) at national, regional or international level; and
3. That are democratically run-which for this purpose is defined to mean that the leadership of the organization is elected in a fair manner with an anonymous vote, and/or that they have an independent body that oversees the work of the board (such as a supervisory board); and
4. That have been in existence for three (3) years or more or have resulted from a merger of organizations, each of which existed for at least three years before the merger came about; and
5. Whose annual income is five thousand euros (€5,000.00) or more; and
6. Who have been non-voting members for at least one year and who have personally attended at least one General Assembly attended before they became voting members, except if they already were members with voting rights on August 27th, 2014.

Voting members name a member of their organization to be their representative to IDEA and participate at yearly General Assembly meetings. Voting members must pay membership fees established by the Board of Directors.

Non-voting membership is open to any legal entity or individual that fulfils the following conditions:

- Supports the goals and objectives of IDEA, and
- Wishes to help IDEA pursue its goals and objectives.

To change an organization's status from that of a non-voting to a voting member, non-voting members must fulfill all statutory criteria if they want to apply for voting membership. After fulfilling all statutory criteria and applying for voting membership, in line with the IDEA Statutes, the decision on changing an organization's membership status from non-voting to voting is made by the Board of Directors by a majority vote and in line with the criteria set out in the IDEA Statutes, and after consulting the voting members of the IDEA General Assembly.

How to Apply?

The membership application procedure consists of clearly defined steps explained in detail below.

These guidelines are for first-time applicants. Any organizations re-applying for membership should contact IDEA directly via email.

We invite all interested organizations to send emails expressing interest in IDEA membership. An expression of interest will only be considered a formal application and registered as such when IDEA receives all the required documentation for the membership status for which you are applying. This must be sent by email to the Executive Director of IDEA, Bojan Marjanović, at bojan@idebate.net.

Once the documents have been received, you will be sent confirmation of receipt. If this confirmation is not forthcoming, please contact us via follow-up emails.

What to apply for?

We encourage all potential applicants to think and explore what they want to achieve from working within the IDEA network and how they want to develop as a debate organization. Here we provide two scenarios and types of organizations that already covered by the IDEA network to help inform your decision and choices. We encourage you to reach out to us even if you do not conform with any of the ideal types provided here.

National or regional non-profit Network Debate Organization

This type of membership is for non-profit organizations that are focused on debate expansion in a country or a region or are already managing large debate networks. They are likely to have a mission that aligns with IDEA's goals and objectives and will be actively working towards meeting criteria that will allow them to become a full-fledged member. As a member, they can participate in the organization's decision-making process and have a vote in shaping its policies and direction.

Non-profit Debate Organizations and Other Entities

This type of membership is also for non-profit debate organizations and other entities that may have similar goals and objectives as the non-profit network debate organizations, but they may not be interested in expansive network of debate clubs and instead wish to engage in debate activities through another way. As a member, they have the opportunity to participate in the organization's decision-making process through working groups or participation at the General Assembly. They may have access to the organization's resources, services, and events. This type of membership is suitable for organizations that want to benefit from the organization's offerings and be a part of the IDEA community without being or working towards becoming an umbrella debate organization.
